GAMES VS. CLIENTS — WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

Two different ways to play

Games (01–03) are prompt files you load into an AI you already have — ChatGPT, Claude, or Gemini. You own the setup; the game runs on your account. Clients (04–05) are ready-made platforms — sign in on the web and the AI, the rules, and the interface are all built for you already. Neither is "better" — pick games if you want ownership and depth, clients if you want zero setup.

Aevum Realm Architect

Rise from serf to sovereign in a deterministic low-fantasy kingdom-builder.

Aevum is a two-file LLM RPG that runs on ChatGPT, Claude, or Gemini. You begin as a serf — one copper piece, no status — and climb through trade, war, and political intrigue toward the throne. The engine is a master prompt plus a nearly 30,000-word Realm Atlas, and the GM is forbidden from improvising around it: geography, economics, and law are all fixed, which is what makes Aevum feel like a real game instead of a story that quietly forgets itself.

The social structure runs deep and varies by nation — rigid feudal hierarchy in Al'thoria, earned standing in Njordheim — so the same starting position plays out differently depending on where you land.

BEST FOR

Players who want strategy-game depth and a world that holds its own rules against you.

Eirathis Strider

A mature, Witcher-style open-world AI RPG for Gemini — dice-less combat, real weight.

Eirathis Strider is a mature, open-world LLM RPG built for Gemini Gems. You play a Strider — a free wanderer with no lord and no nation — roaming a world split across three overlapping layers of reality, taking work from factions who will hire or hunt you, and building relationships with companions who pursue their own lives in the background.

Combat is dice-free: success depends on your skill tier, the intelligence of your tactic, and what you prepared beforehand. The tone draws from The Witcher and BG3 — adult, morally grey, and built for players who want real weight behind their choices.

BEST FOR

Gemini users who want an open, morally grey world with tactical, skill-based combat.

The Chronicler

A slow-burn, relationship-driven AI RPG for Claude where trust is never guaranteed.

The Chronicler is a solo, narrative-first RPG built for Claude Projects. You play the Wayfinder — the game never speaks for you, acts for you, or decides for you. Your companions are driven by their own goals and emotional lives, initiating scenes, pursuing their own agendas, and building or withdrawing trust based entirely on how you treat them over time.

The RomanceCronos engine powers the relationship layer: no affection points, no hidden meters, no "romance unlocked" prompts. Trust grows through consistency and breaks through pressure — it does not regenerate on its own.

BEST FOR

Claude users who want slow-burn character drama where the relationships are the game.

Friends & Fables

The highest-feature-density AI RPG — hex battlemaps, multi-LLM orchestration, a GM who remembers.

Friends & Fables is the current high-water mark for feature density in the AI tabletop space. Its GM, "Franz," runs on a multi-LLM orchestration architecture — a single action can trigger up to a dozen specialized model calls that track lore, character sheets, and map state in parallel, so the world forgets significantly less than most competitors. Add a full hex-based combat system and support for up to 6 players, and it's the closest thing to a real virtual tabletop this niche has.

BEST FOR

Rich, long-term tactical multiplayer campaigns and serious world-building.

Janitor AI

Huge character library, bring-your-own-model, fewer guardrails.

Janitor AI is a character library with a model layer underneath — browse or create character cards, then chat using whatever model you choose. Connect your own OpenAI or Anthropic API key to route conversations through a frontier model, or use the free in-house Janitor LLM with no setup at all. The catalogue of community-made characters is the largest of any platform in our directory, spanning every genre and franchise.

BEST FOR

One-on-one character chat and multi-character social roleplay, not long structured campaigns.

Loading a game (Aevum, Eirathis, Chronicler)

Every Arcanum Original ships as two files — a master prompt and a world file. Download both from the game's page, then load them wherever you already have access.

ChatGPT (Custom GPT)

- 01 Explore GPTs → + Create
Switch to the Configure tab.
- 02 Paste the master prompt
Drop the entire file into the Instructions box.
- 03 Upload the world file
Under Knowledge, upload the game's world document, then Create.

Claude (Project)

- 01 Projects → + Create Project
Name it after the game.
- 02 Paste the master prompt
Into the project's custom instructions.
- 03 Upload the world file, start chatting
Into the Knowledge panel, then open a new chat inside the project.

Gemini (Gem) — free Google account works

- 01 Gems → Gem manager → New Gem
Name it after the game.
- 02 Paste the master prompt
Into the Instructions field.
- 03 Add the world file, save, play
Use "add knowledge" to attach it, then select the Gem to start.

Starting a client (Friends & Fables, Janitor AI)

Friends & Fables

---

- 01 Go to fables.gg and sign up free
No download required — it runs in the browser.
- 02 Start a solo campaign or invite friends
Up to 6 players in one party.
- 03 Let Franz run the table
Describe your action in plain language — the GM and combat math handle the rest.

Janitor AI

- 01 Go to janitorai.com and create a free account
No download required.
  - 02 Search the character library
Or create your own character card.
  - 03 Chat instantly, or connect an API key
The free in-house model works out of the box; add your own key later for a frontier model.

Games drifting after a long session? Every Arcanum Original ships a built-in `/fix_state` command that corrects itself — type it any time something feels off.
